

EYEBROW APPLICATOR TEMPLATE

Abstract

A template for applying simulated eyebrows to a person's face is provided. In general, the template is formed from a sheet of material having a shape that is adapted to be disposed on a portion of a person's face. A cutout portion is formed at a substantial midpoint of a lower edge of the template, and it is adapted to seat and extend around a substantial portion of a person's nose when the template is positioned on a person's face. The template further includes right and left eye holes that are formed adjacent to right and left edges of the template, and right and left eyebrow slots that are formed above the right and left eye holes and below the upper edge. A fastening element, such as a strap, can be used to temporarily position the template on the user's face during application of a simulated eyebrow.